An Argentine Change
What Will Maine Do?
Too Many Law Factories
S. W. Straus, a Builder

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE ARGENTINE REVOLUTION is successful. As this is written, former President Irigoyen is ill and a prisoner in the military barracks at La Plata, and strict military law rules the country. For some time after a white flag was displayed from the government building at Buenos Aires it was unknown what had become of Irigoyen.

One result of the revolution may be closer relations between this country and the Argentine. Irigoyen did not like the United States. We grew too fast to please him, and this he indicated by refusing at intervals to send any representative to Washington. There is none there at this moment.

If he can and will come here now we shall try to prove that we are not as bad as he thought.

• • •

TODAY MAINE elects a governor, and wise ones predict a gain for the Democrats. Republicans will win, as a matter of course.

The Maine election is studied carefully by politicians. Coming ahead of other elections, it shows how the people feel.

What citizens think of the slump and their view on "who is to blame" may be gathered from the Maine vote.

The dull registration seems to indicate that the Maine people are not much interested.

PRESIDENT LOWELL of Harvard says our national law-making factories are too numerous and too busy. He speaks of 49 law factories grinding out laws at high speed, referring to the 48 state legislatures and the national congress.

He might say 98 factories, the upper and lower houses of the 48 states, plus the senate and house in Washington, and the White House, legislating by suggestion, most properly, makes thee number 99.

President Lowell says that there exist in America more statutes than automobiles, which is perhaps an exaggeration, as automobiles number about 25,000,000.

Of all the laws, the only one that attracts much attention is the prohibition law, and that is, unfortunately, flouted by the "respectable," exploited by the tune of billions a year by the criminals and takes up the energy of government that ought to be concentrated on something more constructive than bootlegging.

S. W. STRAUS, who died in New York yesterday, was one of the most constructively useful Americans of his generation.

He encouraged and facilitated building and did more than any man, at the close of the war, to make up for lack of some building during the war years.

Ignoring many opportunities for profit, he instructed his organization, which covers the United States, to concentrate on the financing of dwellings only. And he co-operated generously and wisely with those whom he knew to be competent builders.

Mr. Straus' death is a severe loss to many friends and to wisely conservative business methods. It will not, however, affect the work of his carefully constructed organization, the S. W. Straus company.

Seriously ill for more than a year

ALL ARGENTINE LINES UP WITH NEW REGIME

Nationwide Holiday Declared for Swearing in of New Ministers.

ORDER BEING RESTORED

Situation Tense but Calm as Uriburu and Aids Take Charge.

By The Associated Press

BUENOS AIRES, Argentine, Sept. 8—All Argentina today welcomed the revolution by which President Hipolito Irigoyen and his regime were ousted from office, and shared a nationwide holiday declared for the purpose of swearing in the new ministers at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Most of the people of Buenos Aires started out for their accustomed work this forenoon, not knowing the holiday was in force. They gladly joined the enormous crowd gathered before the government house or took part in parades, enthusiastically shouting for the revolution. The military junta headed by General Jose Evaristo Uriburu declared the inauguration of the new ministers should be one of "solemnity befitting the moment."

The new government continued to designate officials throughout the country, issuing widespread orders for the arrests of certain ministers and officials whose part in the rebellion appeared doubtful.

Province after province telegraphed its adhesion to the new order.

Martial law continued in force today and the atmosphere was charged with tenseness, yet calm prevailed.

Irigoyen was imprisoned in a military barracks. Guards about the place professed to be there to prevent any of the populace, which two years ago returned him to office by an overwhelming vote, from harming him.

U. S. DECISION TO COME

Policy in Argentina and Peru Uncertain; Officials Silent.

By International News Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8—The American government's policy in Argentina and Peru, the two South American Republics which changed their rulers almost overnight through revolution, was yet to be decided upon today.

Secretary of State Stimson and other administration officials are silent on the subject of recognition of the new regimes—or rather where recognition shall continue. The United States has accredited representatives at the capitals of both countries, but whether in the case of Peru the American diplomatic representatives remain in that country depends largely on the fate of the deposed President Augusto Leguia.

There were indications at the state department that Irigoyen's downfall in Argentina was looked upon with complacency.

Irigoyen has been a thorn in the side of the Coolidge and Hoover administrations, and no secret is made of the fact that because of the anti-American attitude of Irigoyen, relations between Argentina and the United States have not been of the best. State department officials hope the new regime will adopt a more friendly attitude.

WOUNDS FATAL TO LOCAL MAN

Harold William Smith, Bystander at Shooting Fray, Dies in Hospital.

Harold William Smith, 20, thought to have been seriously but not mortally wounded in a shooting affair in the Arcade hotel in Springfield Sunday night, Aug. 24, died in a Springfield hospital yesterday at 7:35 p. m.

Smith, who was a clerk in the hotel, was accidentally shot in a marital fray in which he was not involved. Roy G. Staley, who did the shooting, in which his wife, Mrs. Jude Staley with whom he became angered after she refused to listen to his plans for a reconciliation, was slightly injured, shot and killed himself after wounding his wife and Smith.

Shot in Back

Smith was standing in the lobby of the hotel when Mrs. Staley rushed out of a coffee shop and towards him, asking for a gun with which to protect herself from her husband against whom she had recently started divorce proceedings. Staley ran after his wife and began shooting. She suffered a flesh wound on the arm, and Smith was shot in the back, between the shoulders. Staley turned the gun on himself and died almost instantly.

Smith is the son of Elkana Smith of 553 North Prospect street and before going to Springfield some time ago, was bell captain at Hotel Harding here. He was a member of Epworth M. E. church here and of Kappa Alpha Phi fraternity in Springfield. He was born in Marion May 15, 1910.

Services Here

Surviving him are his father, four brothers, Roy E. Smith of Chillicothe, Francis G. Smith of 997 Congress street, Warren J. Smith and Ray Eugene Smith at home, and a stepbrother, Herbert J. Gumpf of Dayton. His mother, Bertha Jeanette Mann Smith, and a sister, Mary Ellen, preceded him in death.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p. m. at the home on North Prospect street and at 2:30 p. m. at the C. E. Curtis Co. mortuary on East Center street. Dr. C. E. Turley, pastor of Epworth M. E. church, assisted by Dr. Marquette of a Springfield M. E. church, will officiate. Burial will be in Marion cemetery. The body was brought to Marion in the C. E. Curtis Co. car and will be removed to the home on North Prospect street today at 7:30 p. m. It may be viewed at the home until funeral time.

Birth Control Proposal Rejected by Methodists

By The Associated Press

OXFORD, O., Sept. 8—The Ohio Methodist Episcopal conference, in closing session here today, threw out a resolution of the committee on reform dealing with the question of birth control.

The committee had called attention to the actions of other church bodies in recommending the dissemination of birth control information by doctors in certain cases, and recommended that the Ohio conference do likewise. This brought a storm of protest from many delegates, and the recommendation was thrown out.

196,000 IN SCHOOL

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Sept. 8—Under the tutelage of about 6,000 teachers approximately 196,000 pupils were expected in schools in greater Cleveland today.

SCHOOL ENROLLMENT IN MARION IS 5,981

Total on Opening Day Is Gain of 155 in Year; Harding Has 812.

Marion public schools gained 155 pupils over last year with the first report of total enrollment this year, made today at noon from the offices of Superintendent George A. Bowman following opening of the first day's session. Enrollment was 5,826 on the opening day last year and 5,981 this year.

Faces were scrubbed this morning, shoes were shined, best dresses were donned, and mannish necktles were worn by the small army of "first graders," who marched into the halls of learning this morning, some frightened, some belligerent and most of them on tip-toes with excitement at this new adventure that is to extend over 12 years for most of them.

With the exception of those schools in which grades were shifted, the schools in general over the city showed average increases. Harding High school had an increased enrollment of 40 students, Central Junior High school gained 31 students on the opening day this year over last year and Vernon school, including Junior High school, gained 37 students.

Comparing with last years' total, there were 4,183 elementary pupils

NEEDLES TO GO BACK TO PEN

Escaped Convict Captured by Sheriff at Friend's Home in Prospect.

Homer Needles, 34, of Columbus, escaped London prison farm trusty, was to be taken back to London today by Sheriff John J. Francis following his capture Sunday at 2 a. m. at the home of a friend in Prospect, where he is said to have been hiding for several days.

Needles' capture occurred after the escaped convict had fallen into a trap laid by Sheriff Francis, who expected the man to visit his Prospect friends after his escape on Aug. 30.

The prison farm trusty had been serving time following his conviction in Marion on a charge of chicken theft operations said to extend into 10 counties. His term would have expired next February. He was arrested early this year in Springfield where he is alleged to have disposed of his loot.

He escaped, Needles told Francis, to help his wife provide for their six children, two of whom are in Columbus and the other four in the detention home here. Needles declared the state had failed to pay his family the legal per diem allowance given families of convicts.

FRENCH AIR HEROES HONORED BY HOOVER

Program at White House Heard in Extensive Radio Broadcast.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8—President Hoover expressed today to Lieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte the feeling of the United States that their Paris to New York flight returned the visit made to France by Charles A. Lindbergh.

At the White House before the state luncheon he gave in their honor, the president recalled "the 30-hours and more of intense emotion that gripped us while our own Colonel Lindbergh was winging his way to Paris."

"Today, therefore," he said, "every American knows exactly what pride and happiness possesses every French heart, at the knowledge that these two gallant sons of France stand safely on our soil.

The achievements of Coste and Bellonte and Lindbergh were linked by Mr. Hoover with those of two of America's other famous airmen, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Captain "Eddie" Rickenbacker, world war ace.

All were his guests at the luncheon.

Earlier, the French fliers had honored the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington, with a wreath. They also had paid their respects to members of the cabinet.

The fliers were awaited at the White House at 12:30 p. m. (Marion Time.) Radio sets in France were turned on to hear the executive's greetings and the response by the olive-skinned Coste and the blond Bellonte. The broadcast, over the National Broadcasting company system, included also the United States and Canada, an interpreter translating Mr. Hoover's English for France, and the replies of the aviators in French for this country.

Passenger Holds Up Local Taxi Driver; Takes $10 and Machine

E. H. Ault of 304 Forest street, a driver for the Yellow Taxi Co., today was without his cab and was poorer by $10 as the result of being robbed by a passenger last night.

Ault was robbed by a man he drove to Columbus from Marion. When he took his passenger to Hilltop, the western section of Columbus, the latter stuck a gun into his ribs, took $10 away from him and then sped away in the cab.

The man stepped into the taxi office here yesterday at 9 p. m., and offered Ault $15 to take him to Columbus.

He was approximately five feet, eight inches in height, weighed about 200 pounds and had a day's growth of beard, according to Ault.

The cab had not been recovered last night.

GOVERNOR'S NOSE SWATTED BY REPORTER

Newspaperman and Huey Long of Louisiana Battle, Then Apologize.

POLITICS GETTING HOT

Southern State One of 10 Voting This Week; Maine Election Today.

By The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 8—Gov. Huey P. Long was struck on the nose today by William G. Wiegand, a reporter of the New Orleans Item, after the reporter said the governor had called him a profane name.

The reporter had gone into the governor's quarters in the Roosevelt hotel just ahead of a United States deputy marshal who had a subpoena for the governor's appearance in federal court in connection with the disappearance of Samuel Irby and James Terrell. As Wiegand entered the room he said he was seized by two bodyguards of the governor.

He said that as he was being held, the governor called him a vile name on two occasions. The reporter said he broke loose from the guards and struck the governor. He declared the guards grabbed him again and the governor hit him twice in the face.

The governor threatened to have the reporter arrested for impersonating an officer but Robert S. Maestri, commissioner of conservation, disarmed the governor. Governor Long then apologized to Mr. Weigand for calling him the name and Mr. Weigand apologized for striking the governor.

The New Orleans Item has been waging a campaign against Governor Long, who seeks nomination as United States senator.

Long, last night, dramatically whisked into his hotel suite and placed before a radio microphone a man claimed to be Sam Irby, missing after he announced a week ago his intention of filing a slander suit against Long, who opposes Senator Joseph E. Ransdell in tomorrow's Democratic primary.

Mystery still surrounded the disappearance of James Terrell, divorced husband of the governor's private secretary who was with Irby at Shreveport and dropped from sight the same night.

SITUATION MENACING

National Guards Mobolize as Louisiana Voting Draws Near.

By United Press

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 8—Louisiana's tense political situation became dangerously taut today as national guardsmen mobilized, apparently on the order of Governor Huey P. Long, and city police guarded newspaper plants.

Although Long declined to comment and officers refused to commit themselves, the move was interpreted as the governor's fulfillment of a promise to insure "fair play" at tomorrow's primary election even if he had to call out the national guard.

MAINE ELECTION ON TODAY

Heads List of 10 States Balloting This Week.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8—Ten states will choose party candidates for the senate, house or state offices this week, led by the election today in Maine, only inter-party contest before November.

Maine voters choose for senator between Wallace H. White, former Republican representative, and Frank H. Haskell, the Democratic choice. After this week only three states will have to select party nominees, Massachusetts, New York and Wisconsin, holding primaries on Sept. 16.

Maryland has no senatorial election this year and in the primary today the candidates for governor are unopposed. Albert C. Ritchie is to obtain the Democratic nomination to succeed himself while Mayor William F. Broening of Baltimore receives the Republican right to oppose him in November.

South Carolina Primary

In South Carolina Tuesday a Democratic run-off primary is to decide between Senator Cole L. Blease and James F. Byrnes who opposed him unsuccessfully in 1924, and between Irba C. Blackwood and Olin D. Johnston, both of Spartansburg, for the governorship.

On the same day Louisiana Democrats will battle the contests between the veteran Senator Ransdell and Governor Huey P. Long, who, only six years old when his opponent entered the senate, is seeking to oust him from the Washington post.

EXHIBIT LIST SAID LARGEST IN MANY YEARS

Race Program Attracts 175 Horses; Card Calls for Speed Events on Three Days.

RODEO IS FREE FEATURE

Ground Space Reservations and Live Stock Shows Exceed Former Years.

With the list of exhibitors, number of concessions, number of race horses and other features far exceeding former years, Marion county's 1930 fair program today was nearing completion for the opening of the fair Tuesday afternoon.

The fair, which this year celebrates its eighteenth anniversary in Marion county, will last for four days, Tuesday to Friday, inclusive.

Concession stands were being erected and exhibits were being placed today in readiness for the opening Tuesday. A number of the horses entered in the races on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday were being sent around the oval today by their drivers in order to become accustomed to the track which is in good condition as the result of yesterday's rain.

175 Horses Entered

More than 175 horses had been entered today in the three-day racing program, which offers $3,500 in purses, Carl W. Sifritt, secretary of the fair, announced. F. E. Kraner is superintendent of the speed department.

The program for the Junior Fair this year has been enlarged to such an extent that the exhibits will be housed in the poultry shed instead of a tent as formerly, it was announced. Crops, shop work, horticulture, animal husbandry and poultry will comprise the major portion of the junior program.

A wild west rodeo, said to be one of the best organizations of its kind now touring the country, will be featured every night during the fair and on Saturday afternoon. The rodeo will be staged in the oval before the grandstand. Twenty persons and 40 animals will perform, and roping, racing, rough riding, lariat throwing and horsemanship will be exhibited.

Granges To Exhibit

Nine granges in the county will have complete exhibits, Sifritt said, in addition to approximately 75 individual exhibitors, who are divided as follows: horses, eight; cattle, 13; sheep, eight; hogs, 14; vegetables and canning, eight; poultry, two, and fine arts, 16.

Art exhibits are so numerous this year that the entire space in the art hall has been taken and numerous exhibitors were refused room because of the crowded condition.

Ground space for the various concessions has been completely sold in the vicinity of the grandstand and Sifritt was forced to send some of the tents to the north side of the grounds, a location never before used for concessions. There will be 22 concessions.

Livestock exhibits will be paraded in front of the grandstand Friday afternoon as a feature of the closing day of the fair.

Because of the crowded condition of the grounds and because of the large number of race horses entered, Sifritt and the remainder

GRAND JURY OPENS SEPTEMBER TERM

Second Degree Murder Charge Against Lloyd Bensley Among Cases.

Whether an indictment for second degree murder will be returned against Lloyd Bensley of Prospect was to be considered today by the Marion county grand jury when it began deliberations on six cases scheduled for the September term in common pleas court.

Bensley is charged with second degree murder following the fatal shooting of Haze Ashbrook near Bensley's home more than a month ago. The shooting occurred during an altercation over Bensley's step-child, the son of Ashbrook by his former wife, now Mrs. Bensley.

The case of John Hopkins of Green Camp, charged with breaking and entering a granary owned by Norris Carey of near Green Camp, is one of the other cases before the jury. Others are as follows: Everett Barnhill, charged with breaking and entering a dwelling; Henry Blue, charged with carrying concealed weapons; John Blue, charged with grand larceny, and Marion Piper, charged with stealing gasoline from an automobile parked on Davids street.

Due to the small number of cases, the jury is expected to complete its deliberations today and probably will make a report of its findings to Judge George B. Canfield Tuesday.

REMODELING ONE PHASE OF MODERNIZATION

EVERY ROOM IS INCLUDED

New Equipment Often Needed To Bring Every Section of House Up-to-Date.

The home modernizing movement is a broad and comprehensive program to make modern and up to date each part of the house.

Very often the remodeling of the house is the outward evidence of the modernizing but it must be understood that remodeling is only one phase of the movement.

The outward lines of the home may be modern—in keeping with the architectural practices of today. From the standpoint of the passerby this home is modern and complete. It does not need modernizing.

Yet an examination of the interior of the dwelling may show that the heating plant is inefficent, causing unusually high fuel bills. Or it may disclose that there are a lack of electrical outlets in rooms where they are badly needed.

Modernization Needed

In such a home remodeling may not be necessary but modernization is needed for no home is modern that is in need of improvements.

Modernization embraces many factors. The outward lines of the house, the interior arrangement of the rooms, the conveniences and accessories of the home, the environment of the dwelling, all may need improvement. And if such be the case, modernization is more or less necessary.

Times change and the average house grows old. Every home that was built five years ago is lacking in some improvements that aid in giving comfort or in satisfying the desire for beauty.

Fixtures Grow Out of Date

Electrical fixtures such as the chandeliers of the living or dining room may be giving good service yet be slightly out of date from the standpoint of looks and style. Like styles in garments the various appliances of the home change from year to year. Never models vary in appearance from those of yesteryear.

More efficient methods of performing the household duties come into being. The older types must be discarded in favor of the new. Electric washing machines take the place of the older hand operated washers. Electrical thermostats now regulate automatically the heating plant, varying the temperature of the interior of the home as needed. Vacuum sweepers aid in cleaning the rooms.

The Home Becomes Beautiful

Pleasant as the home may be, a constant flow of new aids to home beauty permeate the market. New rugs and draperies, furniture, wall coverings and the like give a new touch to the home and mark it as being up to date.

Improving the home may be a matter of landscaping, for no home is really modernized if lawns and shrubbery are not planted and developed. The lines of the home may be modern, the interior up to date, but the whole is not complete unless it is properly set off by spacious, well-trimmed lawns and artistically placed flowers and shrubbery.

PERSONALITY, CHARM IN COLOR SCHEME

White or Other Light Shades Suitable for Colonial Type Structures.

The personality and charm of your home often rests on the selection of the color of the house Stereotyped color schemes are the curse of the American landscape. A little variation in the color trim will often endow your house with an amazing amount of individuality without in any way making it bizarre.

For small houses of the Colonial type pure white, ivory or cream are suitable for the walls while the trim may be in sage green, light olive green or medium blue.

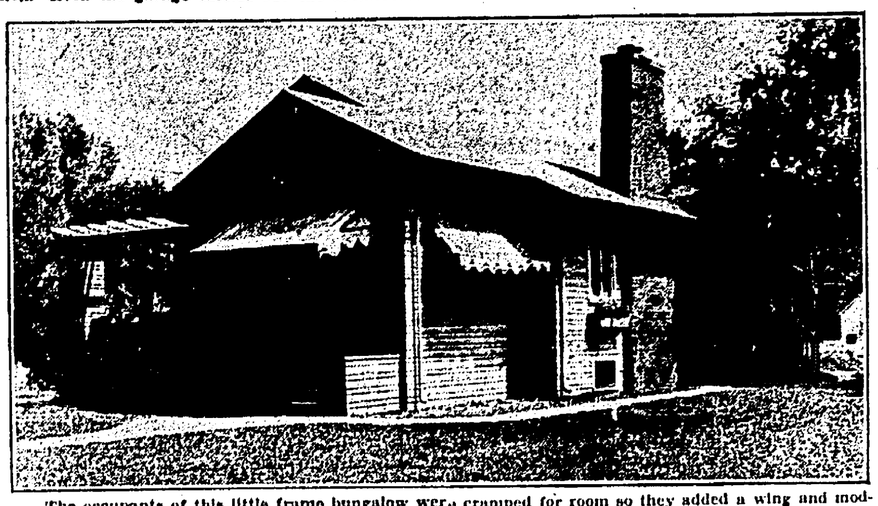
A house of the Italian or Spanish type looks well with walls of deep buff and trim of terra cotta. Houses without any architectural individuality may be treated with body of old ivory and trim of sage green, light cream and pale olive green, colonial yellow and dark tan, ash grey and warm drab, light blue and light brown and variations of these. The house, it's setting and size must be considered when choosing the color.

The purpose of painting the trim a different color is to emphasize the architectural lines. If certain parts of the trim are out of keeping with modern practice, paint them like the body of the house and they are subdued. Ginger bread ornamentation found on the houses built twenty or thirty years ago may be subdued by painting this ornamentation the same color as the body of the house.

You have to care a great deal for your friend before you dare ask him questions.

HANDSOME SPANISH HOME REMODELING RESULT

This modern stucco home was once the frame bungalow below. Illustrations like those reproduced here show the remarkable results that can be achieved by modernization. Even the garage carries out the architectural scheme.



The occupants of this little frame bungalow were cramped for room so they added a wing and modernized the building so that it became the striking Spanish stucco home at the top. These before and after pictures prove the value of modernization.

SPANISH HOME FROM COTTAGE

Addition of Wing, Stucco Makes Modern Structure from Frame Building.

When the small frame California type bungalow illustrated below became too small for the family, the owner decided that a wing should be added to the dwelling to give him the needed space.

At the same time he seized the opportunity to change the exterior design of the building giving it the Spanish motif, as shown in the illustration at the left.

So great has been the change in the exterior lines that it hardly seems possible that this beautiful stucco home was once the frame bungalow below.

Wing Contains Living Room

The porch at the front of the frame bungalow was torn away and an addition ran out to the right forming a wing containing a living room with a broad fireplace. French doors with many small paned lights open out onto a concrete terrace. The original chimney still remains, serving the heating plant in the basement.

A bay of six small windows projects at the front of the older section of the house. Another broad opening at the left contains a number of windows. Above in gable is a narrow sash that lights the attic and aids the architect's design of the facade.

The quaint entrance with high opening and odd hanging lantern heightens the Spanish effect.

The extension of the wall from the corner of the building tends to give it a low, clinging effect.

Plenty of Light

One of the features of this Spanish home is the large number of windows. Single units are rare. Usually each bay contains two or more sash. The use of transoms lights distinguishes these windows.

The selection of a Spanish architectural design called for stucco which has many merits. Stucco homes are warm in winter and cool in summer. This material is fireproof. Properly applied using modern methods, it will last for years without attention. Usually a stucco structure is white but the material may be tinted in various colors if the environment requires.

The exterior views on this page show what has been done with the outside of the home. They do not indicate the radical changes that occurred within.

A new addition to a building usually calls for new furniture, rugs and draperies. The interior decorations of the addition have been made up to date. Throughout the home new accessories have been added to aid the mistress of the house in her daily duties. In every respect the modernized home is complete.

RADIO NOW BECOMES PART OF FURNITURE

Its Selection Must Take into Consideration Beauty as Well as Tone.

Remember that your radio is a piece of furniture as well as a source of pleasure. Choose the cabinet to harmonize with the furniture of the room in which it is placed.

Often the radio is purchased entirely with its technical features in mind. True, tone is important and the ability of the set to get distant stations a convenience and source of pleasure. Yet do not overlook the importance of the cabinet as a piece of furniture. The thoughtful home-owner will see that the radio fits into the decorative scheme also.

Color in Basements Now in Demand with Women

The invasion of color in the kitchen and bath resulted from the housewife's desire to brighten up the home. Now the man of the house can gratify his need of colors for a heating plant manufacturer is advertising a heater that is vivid with color. Red seems to be the popular shade with them.

Wide Door Style Appropriate For Many Types of Residences

The wide door is appropriate for the bungalow or cottage, the Colonial Spanish or other type of house.

Then, too, it is a decided convenience to the owner, especially when bulky objects such as large pieces of furniture, are to be carried within the house. They can be moved through the door without danger of marring either the furniture, the woodwork or the walls.

Today, without increasing love of the outdoors and its sunlight and fresh air, many home owners prefer to install doors with a clear sheet of plate glass in the upper part while the lower half is wood paneled in attractive designs.

Doors of this type enable the owner to secure a clear, unobstructed view of the trees and lawn and allow an abundance of sunshine to light the front hallway.

Often the door is flanked on each side by side lights which add to the atractiveness of the design. Such side lights must remain in keeping with the motif of the door itself.

Fan Lights Are Attractive

The simple, white painted, paneled Colonial door is often surmouted by a semi-circular transom, known as a "fan light" or "sunburst" with panes sometimes leaded in intricate design. Colonial doors using the fan light are often paneled with glass.

Some modern homes have doors with a fan light over the head of the door which is of paneled wood giving a Colonial atmosphere.

Dutch Colonial Originated To Defeat Old Roof Tax

THE origin of the Dutch Colonial style of architecture with its dormer windows piercing the extended shingled roof is explained in the following story, which sounds plausible.

The original Dutch settlers of New Amsterdam were thrifty souls and when a tax was placed on two story houses, the settlers got around the law by designing their two story houses with roofs which swept down the side of the second floor to the ceiling point of the usual first floors. The second floor technically became an attic by this design and so the house was not subject to the roof tax.

End of Downward Swing in Farm Prices Indicated

Possibility of Increase in Latter Part of Year Seen by Farm Bureau Research Man in Comment on Livestock Market.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 8—Prices for farm products may have reached the lowest point of the present swing and may show some increases for the latter part of the year, in the opinion of C. J. West, research director for the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation. Last year prices were much higher than at present, he points out.

The high price for hogs was reached in July last year, with an average farm price of $10.33 per 100 pounds as estimated by the government. There was a continuous decline until November when the average was about $1.80 lower or $8.54. This average continued for a number of weeks. There is a probability that the high month this year may have been August with an estimated value of $8.51 at the middle of the month.

"There are many indications to support the view that hog prices may not drop to any great extent during October and November, except possibly at times when there is a temporary oversupply on the market," West says. "Prices which the public is willing to pay for pork seem to be about a balance with live hog prices at present.

Outlook Favorable

"Later in the season increases in the number of hogs at the markets do not depress prices to the same extent as in the summer because of the demand for packing hogs. If the government's and other estimates are correct there will be some decline in the number of hogs next year, so that there should not be hesitancy in packing hogs somewhere near the present price levels. Altogether, the outlook seems very favorable for reasonably high hog prices this winter.

"With the hog market somewhere near its peak for the season there is considerable uncertainty as to the best time to sell finished hogs. Many farmers have hogs which are about ready for market and the farmers should watch markets carefully and not take any long chances for increases in the market in the near future.

"The corn-hog ratio now stands at about 9.8 as compared with about 11 a year ago. This means that 100 pounds of pork is equivalent in value to 9.8 bushels of corn, whereas a year ago it was equivalent to 11 bushels. The farmer who could put 100 pounds of weight on a hog with 10 bushels of corn was making a feeding profit a year ago, but this year is feeding at a loss.

Declines in Cattle Industry

"Drastic declines have taken place in the cattle industry in Ohio and in the United States. It would appear that any changes in cattle prices must be for the better, especially since all the reports point to a greatly decreased supply. Beef cattle prices average $6.20 per 100 pounds throughout the United States as compared with $9.02 a year ago. In Ohio, beef cattle averaged $6.40 on Aug. 15 as compared with $10.70 last year. Veal calves in Ohio are $9.30 as compared with $13.90 a year ago. Milk cows are estimated by the government to be selling on an average in Ohio of $60 per head compared with $99 a year ago.

"The average selling price of lambs at the farm is estimated by the government at $6.80 per hundred pounds. Prices a year ago were $11.50 for Ohio. The average sheep price is estimated at $2.70 in Ohio as against $6.20 last year. A part of these lower prices for sheep and lambs is accounted for in the decline in wool prices from 33 cents to 22 cents.

"The price for chickens at the farm averages 19 cents in Ohio, which is five cents lower than last year. The egg price is 22 cents as against 32 cents a year ago. Butterfat prices average 35 cents as compared with 44 cents last year.

Let's Have a SHOWDOWN on Tires! . . .

Do you know that many big tire makers are offering and selling "second-line" tires to the public?

And do you know that this is being done to set up favorable price comparisons against "FIRST-LINE" Riversides . . . all because Riversides save you about 27% in price?

Think it over!

Perhaps you have been beguiled into believing "second-line" tires of other makes are the equal of Riversides . . . in quality, workmanship, strength and performance! Simply because the prices are about the same!

Anyway . . . we believe you are entitled to the TRUTH . . . that RIVERSIDES are "FIRST-LINE" tires, backed by our Unlimited Guarantee . . . that they are ONLY to be compared to "first-line" tires of other makes . . . and that any other comparison is for the sake of making a favorable price impression on some hapless tire purchaser.

And listen to this . . .

You may save a lot of after-grief and about 27% of your good money . . . if you'll but refer to the tables printed below when you buy your next tire. . .

So that you will know the names.

Best Known "First-Line" Tires	Best Known "Second-Line" Tires
Goodyear—All Weather	Goodyear—Pathfinder
Goodrich—Silvertown	Goodrich—Cavalier
Firestone—Gum Dipped	Firestone—Oldfield and Anchor
U. S. Royal	U. S. Rubber Co.'s Peerless
Ward's—RIVERSIDE	Ward's—TRAILBLAZER

This is a Partial List : : : there are a number of other makers who produce two or more grades of Tires.

Come in . . . let us show you the difference . . . and in your visit to our stores you will not be urged to buy.

NOTE: If you want a "second-line" tire . . . buy Trailblazers . . . sold only by Montgomery Ward & Co., also sold at very much less than other "second-line" tires. They're as good as, or better than other "second-line" tires . . . full of honest service.

P. S. You may buy Riversides . . . or Trailblazers . . . on Easy Payments . . . in all sizes. We invite you to come in . . . and talk over with us your needs. Don't forget . . . FREE MOUNTING SERVICE on all Ward Tires!

ASSIGNMENTS HELD UP

Announcement of Appointments To Come Late Today.

Dr. C. E. Turley of Epworth and Rev. W. Martell George of Wesley M. E. churches, will not know whether or not they are to be returned to their Marion pastorates until the hour of the adjournment of the annual Ohio Methodist Episcopal conference at Oxford, O. Assignments would not be made public this afternoon, an Associated Press dispatch said today.

President A. H. Upham of Miami university, scene of the conference sessions, today expressed to the delegates his pleasure in having the meetings. Bishop Blake responded and an invitation for the conference to meet at Oxford again next year was extended.

In issuing his invitation for the 1931 meetings, President Upham said he would see that the place would be "swept and garnished." This brought a twinkle to the eyes of Bishop Blake, who said, "You are a brave man. There is a passage in the Bible which states that when the temple is swept and garnished seven times as many devils return as before."

of the board today were considering the installation of a loud speaking system to enable the crowd to hear results of races and various other announcements.

Judging Starts Wednesday

Judging of the various exhibits will begin Wednesday in order to give the exhibitors time to get their entries in readiness.

School children in the entire county will be allowed free admittance to the grounds on Friday, which has been designated as children's day. City schools already have announced their intention of closing in order to permit pupils to attend the fair, while the county schools also are expected to close for the occasion.

Civil War veterans, as in former years, will be admitted to all sessions of the fair free, the board announced today.

Herb Meeks, stunt flyer, today was added to the list of features. Meeks will do stunts with his plane and will have a 17-year-old parachute jumper drop from a wing of the plane on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. The youth will attempt to alight near the grandstand. Meeks also will be stationed at the north end of the grounds for passenger flights.

An exhibit of relics, most of which are old rifles and guns, will be shown by Addison Bain of Marion in the art hall during the week.

Bands Scheduled

Roscoe McCulloch, U. S. senator from Ohio, today sent his regrets to Sifritt that he is unable to accept an invitation to attend the fair because of the state Republican convention in Columbus which he will attend.

Band concerts will be given on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. On Wednesday the Grand Prairie grange band will play, and on Thursday the Marion Municipal band will present concerts. The 60-piece Future Farmers of America band, a Marion county organization said to be the only band of its kind in the country, will play on Friday.

The Capital City quartet, a group of Negro singers from Columbus, also will offer free entertainment during the week.

General admission to the grounds will be 35 cents, Sifritt announced. Children under 12 years of age will be admitted free. Admission to the grandstand will be 25 cents extra.

SERIES OF CLUBBINGS APPARENTLY SOLVED

Negro Confesses to Crimes; Claims He Wanted Money To Gamble.

By United Press

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 8—Two Toledo clubbings and the series of five that has terrorized Detroit for a week apparently were solved today with the confession here of a colored man that he is the clubber.

The clubber is Lee Williams, 26, of Indianapolis, Ind. His motive was to obtain money for gambling, police said.

He was captured Sunday by three citizens who saw him flee from a shoe shop after he had attacked Gust Fushianes, owner, with a hammer in a futile attempt to rob him.

A mob assembled quickly and when patrolmen arrived the clubber was being threatened with hanging.

He was taken to the safety building and questioned by detectives.

He admitted the Fushianes slugging and that of Frank Levine, of the Toledo Salvage company, who is near death in Mercy hospital from a fractured skull inflicted by the clubber, who had robbed him of $2.

"I Don't Feel Just Right, Doc"

(The Common Way of Describing Acidity)

You're not sick, yet not well. Your stomach isn't just right, you don't sleep well and you tire easily. Your color isn't what it should be and you probably look drawn. A sort of vague, run-down feeling is one of the first symptoms of acidity. Acidity not only causes acid-indigestion with gas, sourness and burning, but sets up poisons which sap strength and vitality and makes us feel physically and mentally low.

Magnesia Oxoids, developed in Germany by a famous, 100-year-old pharmaceutical house, correct acidity in the right way! Upon contact with the acid in the stomach, Magnesia Oxoids generate nascent, or active oxygen. The "live" oxygen stimulates the alkaline gastric mucus, checks putrefaction in the gastro-intestinal canal and stimulates the activities of the intestinal walls which aids the natural movement of the bowels. All three effects are necessary to the true correction of acidity.

Make this Acidity Test

To see just how "acid" you are, make this test. Get a package of Magnesia Oxoids from Bradley's Drug Store or any other good druggist. Take two after each meal and see how much better you feel—how much more soundly you sleep and how much more energy you have. If, after taking the contents of one bottle, the results don't more than amaze you, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money promptly and in full. A-5-S

POLAR PARTY FINDS ANOTHER SKELETON

Believed To Be Remains of Frankel, Member of Andree Group.

By The Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 8—The frozen northern wastes of White Island, or Hvitvoen, have given up another body, presumably that of the third member of the Andree balloon expedition of 1897.

A party of journalists aboard the sealing vessel Isbjoern, excited at discoveries of the crew of the Bratvang on the island and hurrying there themselves, managed to land there Saturday and seek relics of the ill-fated expedition which Dr. Gunnar Horn and his associates left behind.

The skeleton found was presumed to be that of Knut Frankel, third member of the Andree group, who it generally had been believed, died enroute to White Island from the spot where the balloon, in which they wished to cross the north pole, came down. The crew of the Bratvang found only two bodies. A group of bones they believed to be the remains of the third man turned out to be a polar bear's bones.

In addition to the third skeleton the Isbjoern party found a number of other things left by the Andree expedition of 33 years ago, including scientific instruments, weapons, pieces of the basket below the Andree balloon and Frankel's notebooks. They said the camp was in excellent order. They believed the explorers died from a sudden catastrophe, such as a blizzard.

ONE SERIOUSLY HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

E. E. Saxton, 50, Steps into Path of Car; Woman Injured.

One person is in City hospital with serious injuries and another is nursing bad bruises at the Frederick C. Smith clinic as the result of week-end auto accidents in Marion.

Pavements made slippery by a drizzling rain Saturday night and showers yesterday made driving hazardous here.

Edward E. Saxton, 50, of Edison, sustained several broken ribs and body bruises when he stepped into the path of an automobile driven by Thomas Coon of 285 Fies avenue Saturday night. Saxton stepped from the south curb of West Church street near Harding High school to pass to the north side of the street. Going west on Church street, Coon was unable to halt his car or avoid hitting the man, according to police reports.

Saxton was taken to City hospital in the W. C. Boyd ambulance.

Earlier Saturday night, a Willys-Knight driven by George Brown of Evans road skidded on street car tracks on Davids street and crashed into a Chandler roadster parked along the curb. Mrs. Brown was thrown through the windshield, and both Mr. and Mrs. Brown sustained severe injuries. Both were taken to the Frederick C. Smith clinic in the W. C. Boyd ambulance. Brown was released after his injuries were dressed.

Forest Cole of 490 Lee street told police his car was sideswiped by a coupe Saturday night as he was driving on West Center street near Oak street. The driver of the other car did not stop.

A Ford coach driven by Harry Bigford of Oak Grove avenue skidded on the Davids street car tracks into a tree yesterday afternoon, damaging his car.

Two cars, one driven by Mrs. Robert Snyder of 125½ South Grand avenue and the other by Otto C. Schlientz of 310 Hane avenue collided Saturday on East Center street in front of the Cussins & Fearn Co. store. Schlientz is said to have turned onto Center street from an alley at that point directly in front of the Snyder car. Neither car was badly damaged.

A Harmless Prescription, but How it Moves the bowels!

DON'T you want this way of making the bowels behave? A doctor's way to make the bowels move so well that you feel better all over! Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin doesn't turn everything to water, but cleans out all that hard waste clogging your system. It cleans you out without any shock, for it's only fresh laxative herbs a famous doctor found so good for the bowels combined with pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients.

A doctor should know what is best for the bowels. Let Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin show you how soon you can train the bowels to move freely, every day, the way they should. It's wonderful the way this prescription works, but it's perfectly harmless; so you can use it whenever a coated tongue or sick headache gives warning that you are billious. Fine for children, too (it tastes so nice) and they ought to have a spoonful the minute they seem fretful, feverish, or sluggish, or become stuffed up with a cold.

You can get the original prescription Dr. Caldwell wrote so many years ago; your druggist keeps it all ready in big bottles. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and use it any time anyone in the family is constipated.

Daily Proverb—"A man may be more vigorous than his luck, or he may be more bending than his good."

To save powder, the Afghans are now blowing two or three rebels from a cannon at a time. There's conservation of resources for you!

A Pomeroy gas station owner killed one bandit and wounded two others when the three and two companions tried to hold him up. A .500 average is not so bad!

The United States treasury announces that the public debt on August 31 was $16,167,626,000 against $26,596,701,000 on the same date ten years ago. Where in all history is there a record of debt reduction such as this?

Carl Panzran, self-confessed slayer of twenty-two persons, was hanged in Leavenworth, Kansas, Friday. Here's a case where "hanging's too good for a man like that" really applies.

The Berlin ministry of the interior has sent to all German states a suggestion that they emulate Prussia's example by forbidding the sale of strong liquors on election day, September 14. The chief difference between the Prussian plan and our own is that over there drinks that are legally barred on election day are in reality barred.

Prohibition Director Woodcock's disapproval of the proposal to employ boys to spy on bootleggers is another straw to indicate that prohibition enforcement has at last been placed in charge of one who is in touch with the public feeling.

Senator Otis F. Glenn, of Illinois, refers to the "assistant Democrats" in the senate who have been trying to hamstring the administration as "anti-Hoover guerillas." Huh! Who ever heard of a guerilla disguising itself under a party cloak as a prelude to its assaults?

"Mother" Jones, who has made peace with John D. Rockefeller, has contributed $1,000 to the miners who are fighting John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, her hope being that she "may live long enough to see him licked." Apparently union enmities are almost as lasting as those engendered in family circles.

Some time ago Miami, Florida, was sued for $10,000 for railroad fares growing out of its last "bathing beauty" contest and now one of the hotels down there has sued the municipality for $4,999, for providing rooms, food and entertainment for the alleged beauties. An aftermath such as Miami is experiencing is not conducive to the boosting of bathing beauty contests as civic booming enterprises.

As Maine Goes—.

"As Maine goes so goes the nation," is a saying.

Today is election day in Maine. A governor, a legislature, four representatives to congress and a senator are to be chosen. Beginning with a weak primary vote, June 16, the campaigns have dragged along and will conclude with the same results that have characterized Maine elections for such a long time that Senator Fess can predict safely: "Maine will go Republican in 1930."

Representative Wallace H. White, Jr., is the Republican candidate for senator and is opposed by Frank B. Haskell. Governor William Tudor Gardiner will defend his office against Edward C. Moran, Jr. The outcome of the races for these two offices, as well as the others, is of so little concern that, barring unexpected developments, congratulations may be extended to the Republican candidates in advance.

A recent editorial in the New York Times pokes fun at the Republican attitude regarding Maine by quoting the following paragraph from the Portland Press Herald:

"A substantial Republican victory in Maine may have an excellent effect upon the rest of the country. It may be what is required to turn the tide, to provide the impetus which is necessary to stimulate business and pull the country out of the slough of inertia which it now seems to be in. At any rate, if Maine should, at this stage of the game, show signs of Democratic gains, it would probably have a very bad effect on the rest of the country and so, in reaction, adversely affect the people of this state."

There can be only agreement with the comment of the New York Times that this is a "display of logic that makes Aristotle look like a particularly blameless Babbit who hasn't had his adenoids removed."

At any rate, Maine will "go" today. If the direction of its travel be agreeable, the country may follow it in November. One advantage of voting first is that you have a fifty-fifty chance of being called a leader, and Maine Republicans shouldn't be censured too harshly for trying to take advantage of the breaks.

Overthrow of Irigoyen.

The downfall of President Irigoyen of Argentina has removed the one governmental head in the Western hemisphere unfriendly to the United States and the chief obstacle in the way of Pan-American concord. That the overturning came by the way of revolution and was marked by bloodshed, pillage and the torch is a matter for regret. It is always best that government should be orderly in its inception as well as in its processes, but in the present case the revolutionists under General Jose Evaristo Uriburu seem to have the situation well in hand and, barring the possibility of the springing up of revolutionary leaders to contend against Uriburu for the presidency assumed by him, the outcome of the revolt can hardly be other than beneficial not only to Argentina, but to all the New world.

Dr. Hipolito Irigoyen, today a sick man and a prisoner in the hands of the provisional government, has long been recognized as a bar to unity of action in South America in world affairs, and his policies have been such as to constitute a threat at the peace of the continent. Head of the richest and most progressive nation of South America, his influence by reason of his position was great. Not only was he a bar to good relations down there, but up here in North America as well, it seemingly having been his aim to make himself as offensive to the United States as possible.

Irigoyen was the outstanding menace in the Western hemisphere to the Monroe doctrine; and he was never known to have overlooked opportunity to combat Latin-American friendship for this country. It may be recalled that, when the League of Nations placed a tentative reservation in its covenant recognizing the Monroe doctrine, it was Irigoyen who instructed the delegates from Argentina to oppose it.

It was Irigoyen who kept Argentina from signing the Kellogg-Briand peace pact; and this attitude of Argentina in opposition to that covenant renouncing war naturally aroused apprehension on the part of other South American countries.

Under obligation since 1927 to call the next Pan-American sanitary conference, Irigoyen refused, or at least neglected, to do so, and he declined to make report of endemic diseases in his own land.

In his relations to the United States he was particularly offensive at the time President-Elect Hoover was making his good will visit to Latin-America. He delayed in inviting Mr. Hoover to Argentina until his delay constituted an affront, and coolly received the president-elect when he arrived. For well over half a year he refused to name an ambassador to this country and the place is yet vacant. This show of unfriendliness to the United States, it may be said, was one of the causes of his overthrow as it aroused attacks on him in all the papers of Buenos Aires save the two friendly to his administration, the offices of which were wrecked and burned by the mob element ever attendant upon revolutionary movements.

Under all these circumstances there will be little regret in this country that the government of Irigoyen has been overthrown, and many will be inclined to feel that the good to result far more than justified the casualties of the street fighting in Buenos Aires.

Three German liners having refused to accept Jack "Legs" Diamond as a passenger, the German government has arranged to send him back to the United States on a freighter. If Mr. Diamond is of a sensitive disposition, he's liable to acquire the notion that gangsters are not the heroes in the Old world that the newspapers, unfortunately, have made them in the New.

Derby Stable To Be Sold.

The Earl of Derby, who will be remembered by Americans as the guest of honor at the running of the last Kentucky Derby, which derived its name indirectly from that of his family, has announced that he will sell the most of his yearlings and dispense with the services of his trainer.

Although the present head of the house which founded the famous Epsom Derby, has already won this year in stakes over $130,000 on his stable and for the last ten years has won from $100,000 to $300,000 annually, yet he has found it expedient to offer for sale his yearlings as well as many of his famed brood mares for the reason that the upkeep and tax burden make his breeding establishment too great a drain on his finances.

It was the steadily-increasing British tax burden which caused him to dispose of his Bury and Pillrington estates five years ago for something like $5,000,000 and three years ago properties at Liverpool, Booth, Kirkdale and Walton at prices aggregating over $8,000,000, his plan evidently being that of many wealthy Britishers—not only to escape the high taxation such estates are forced to bear, but also to make such disposition of his wealth as to escape the death taxes which are assessed against estates such as were originally his which are almost confiscatory.

While there may be merit in the position of the present British government, that such great estates are detrimental to the best interests of the British people and should be broken up, it doesn't add to the appearance of beautiful rural Britain when it is dotted on all sides by signs reading "For Sale" or "To Let." Even to foreigners who may travel through the provinces such signs on great and beautiful estates are a bit disheartening. How much more disheartening must they be to those who live upon them and whose families have lived upon them for hundreds of years before them!

A collie at Pontiac, Michigan, saved the lives of its master and mistress and their two children by jumping upon its master's bed and awakening him in time to escape with his family before the house collapsed. Another merit mark for "man's best friend."

The city of Peoria, Illinois, is planning a tax of one cent on every package of cigarets sold therein to reimburse it for the $300,000 revenue it lost when prohibition went into effect legally. Considering the present-day consumption, there's little question but what such a tax would put any municipality on Easy street.

CAUGHT.

Editorial Opinion.

A LOAD LIFTED FROM BUSINESS.

The treasury department's statement that the war-inflated public debt of this country has been reduced from $26,596,701,000 to $16,167,636,000 will not be featured on Democratic platforms this fall for the obvious reason that this lifting of more than one-third of the war debt burden from the shoulders of business has been a Republican accomplishment.

When the Wilson administration went out of office the national debt was approximately $24,000,000,000, with an interest charge of $1,024,024,440 for the fiscal year of 1920, which meant a tax of $9.62 on every man, woman and child in the country. The interest charge for 1929 was $678,230,400, or $5.66 per capita, which represented a cut of forty-two per cent. from $1920 and a saving of practically four dollars per capita.

Calvin Coolidge told the business organization of the government on January 28, 1929, that in the short space of seven and a half years "the public debt has been reduced $6,667,000,000. The total saving in interest alone from this and refunding operations is $963,000,000. Four reductions in taxes have returned to the people approximately $2,000,000,000 a year which would have been required had the revenue act of 1918 remained in force. Two and one-half million people have been entirely relieved of all federal taxation."

Skilful financing and the elimination of the extravagance and waste with which the last Democratic administration left the government honeycombed have made it possible for succeeding Republican administrations to accomplish the unprecedented feat of cutting down the national debt by roughly a billion dollars a year. Any one who doubts the practical wisdom of having thus reduced the public debt and eased the burden of taxation has only to reflect how much more serious business depression in this country would be today if industry had still to carry the dead weight of the interest charges that Republican efficiency has lopped off since it replaced Democratic ineptitude in Washington. The Democrats will not advertise this contribution by their opponents to the national welfare; but neither can they deny it — Detroit Free Press.

A Christian Colony.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

Tallmadge township in Summit county stands out by itself in charter construction. There is not another in all the state like it. When the allotment of lands in its purchase were made by the Connecticut Land company, this area went mostly to what is known as the Brace company, though there were a few other purchasers.

For some years there was little demand for land for settlement and it remained in the hands of the original purchaser. But in 1807, when David Bacon, an eastern clergyman who had been assigned to western missionary work, came to the place, he had a vision of a Christian colony of a new type, and opened negotiations with the owners to acquire the entire township, payments to be made on the ground as it was taken for occupation.

He had the township resurveyed to conform to the plan he had. There were to be just sixteen sections with sides of a mile and a quarter each, a road sixty-six feet wide to run along all section lines. Roads were likewise to run diagonally across the township from the corners, and in the center where they intersected there was a reserve of seven and one-half acres for schools, churches, stores, etc.

Immigrants received must be members of either the Congregational or Presbyterian churches, and Rev. Mr. Bacon had a provision in the township law by which two dollars a year must be paid on each 100 acres of land for the support of the church. The project was given a communistic tinge also by the establishment of a free range for sheep owned by the settlers.

It did not work. One provision after another had to be dropped, and finally failure on the financial side made it necessary for the original owners to take the land back and Rev. Mr. Bacon abandoned the project. In 1875 two of his grandsons, both Congregational preachers in the East—Theodore Woolsey Bacon and David Bacon—marked with an inscribed boulder the place where the first David Bacon established his church in Tallmadge.

Occasional Nosebleed.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

What a number of things there are to worry about! A lot of worrying is done over nosebleed.

One of the most common of childhood's ailments is bleeding from the nose. Usually it is not at all serious. Nose bleed is almost always founded on some local disturbance, easily accounted for and corrected.

It is always well to see a doctor if nose bleed occurs often, or if the bleeding is long continued. A very great loss of blood is not good for any one. But sometimes Nature takes this way of getting rid of too much blood in one place, a congested area somewhere in the body.

In our northern climate, especially on the Atlantic sea coast, and inland on the Great lakes, where there is much moisture in the atmosphere, catarrh is one of the most common ailments. One who has repeated colds and catarrh is very apt to have nose bleed from broken tissues in the nose. There is a chronic inflammation of the tissues. Scabs or crusts are formed in the nose and when removed bleeding is sure to be produced.

In some acute fevers nose bleed is a symptom. Measles, influenza, pneumonia, diphtheria, whooping cough, scarlet fever, and especially typhoid fever, are such diseases. Condition where the quality of the blood is reduced, as in anemia, may be accompanied by nose bleed.

Of course, if you have a blow on the nose or some other injury there you would expect to have bleeding after it. But don't worry. nature has provided a clotting of the blood to stop the flow of blood. The ordinary natural processes will usually stop the nose bleed.

There are several simple remedies that can be used in case of nose bleed. Cold applications on the back of the neck or over the nose are recommended. Sometimes putting the feet in hot water will draw the circulation from the head and thus assist in controlling the bleeding. Pinching the nose between the thumb and finger will make pressure sufficient often to control the hemorrhage.

Another good thing to use is tanic acid dissolved in water. This can be applied on cotton. Clear the nose by blowing out the blood clots and then push into the nasal passage a cotton tampon saturated with the fluid. You may use peroxide of hydrogen or adrenalin chloride in the same manner. The latter is a solution which has marked astringency.

The sight of blood is apt to frighten people. We are taught that the blood stream is the very life of the body, and, of course, it is. But fear is foolish, for it sets the heart to beating strongly, and this, in turn, increases the bleeding. Say soothing things to the patient. Calm his fears.

If everything is not all right in a short time call a doctor or take the patient to the nearest clinic.

The Stephenson Centenary.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

In many respects, the railroad may be regarded as the most valuable and indispensable feature of contemporary life. The development of the airplane and automobile industries—or, as we should say, of the automotive industry—within recent decades has tended to lessen the earning power of railroads. While the growth of the motor truck and autobus industries has been immense, and great passenger airliners are rapidly coming into more general use, it can not be effectively denied that the locomotive, drawing a train of eight passenger or freight cars, or both in combination, continues to be the most powerful factor in land transportation.

The colossal railroad industry may be said to have had its true beginning a century ago. The triumph of George Stephenson and his famous Rocket came in the Rainhill trials, held by the Liverpool & Manchester railway in October, 1829. Only recently Mr. Henry Ford ordered of the firm of Stephenson & Company, which still exists, a replica of George Stephenson's Rocket for his museum. The Rocket triumphed completely over its competitors and satisfactorily met all the requirements of the trial.

The Rocket not only won for Stephenson the prize of £500, but inaugurated the modern era in transportation.

George Stephenson, the uneducated son of a miner, was born in 1781, and followed the profession of mining pursued by his father. At the age of seventeen he became a plugman, whose sole duty, and sometimes an exciting one, was to keep in order and keep running the engine which pumped water from the mine. Studying the mechanism, temperament and idiosyncrasies of this engine, he became in time to have a thorough knowledge of the principles of its construction, as well as the technic of its operation. Ambitious, of an inquiring mind, young Stephenson went to night school, learned to read and studied everything he could find in books about engines.

Near at hand were curious, primordial engines, which contained the germs of the modern locomotive. There was the curious coal-hauling locomotive built by John Blenkinsop, and the amusing Puffing Billy and Wylam Dilly of William Hedley, built in 1813, both used to haul coal from the mines. After being elevated to the responsible post of superintendent of all the engines used in the Killingsworth collieries, Stephenson constructed engines himself after the Blenkinsop model.

When the Stockton & Darlington railroad, thirty-eight miles long, was opened in 1825, Stephenson drove a small engine of his own construction which hauled thirty-four little cars, constituting a load of ninety tons. A horseman rode in front to clear the track, and sometimes he had to gallop, for the engine would spurt up to the amazing speed of fifteen miles an hour!

Stephenson was a competent inventor and a business man of genuine ability. In the Rocket were embodied essential features of the modern locomotive, some of his own invention, some borrowed from others. But as Kaempffert says: "It was a distinctly new combination which produced a new result. And that is why George Stephenson goes down in the annals of technical achievement with the great—with Arkwright, Watt, Morse, Bell, Edison and Marconi."—Copyright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc.

RADIO NEWS AND PROGRAMS

NBC Network Puts Important Contests on Air

At least twenty-one of the outstanding football games will be described for radio listeners this year through broadcasts arranged by the National Broadcasting Company.

Beginning October 11, descriptions of two games will be offered each Saturday through November 29. In addition several games in the Far West will be broadcast by the NBC Pacific Coast network on days when it is not relaying stories of games played in the East and Middle West.

Graham McNamee, who has described football since the beginning of radio, and William Munday, the "Georgia Drawl", will be at the NBC microphones during the pigskin season.

An innovation in descriptive broadcasts is planned by NBC this year. In addition to the actual account of the game, the fashions displayed at the intercollegiate contests will be described. The company is negotiating with Miss Carmen Ogden of Rochester, widely known radio fashion commentator for her services in giving pleat-by-pleat descriptions of fall sports clothes.

The Army and Navy teams will appear in the season openers for radio listeners this year. Saturday afternoon, October 11, Army battles Swarthmore at West Point and Navy and Notre Dame will meet at South Bend, Indiana. Munday will describe the Army - Swartmore game while McNamee will be at the microphone for the Western contest. The NBC-WEAF network will carry the account of the Army-Swarthmore game while the Navy-Notre Dame broadcast will be heard through an NBC-WJZ network.

S. W. STRAUS RITES SET FOR TUESDAY

Noted Financier and Philanthropist Dies in Hotel at New York.

By International News Service

NEW YORK, Sept. 8—Funeral services will be held here tomorrow for S. W. Straus, chairman of the board of S. W. Straus & Co., which financed the construction of some of the largest buildings in America. He died in a hotel here after a long illness. He was 64.

He was widely known, especially in New York and Chicago, for his charities.

He is survived by his widow, the former Hattie Klee of Pittsburgh, and three daughters, Mrs. Herbert S. Martin, Mrs. Louise Celestin and Mrs. Vladimir Rachesky, all of New York. Two brothers, S. J. T. Straus and Arthur Straus reside in Chicago.

Interment will be made in Brooklyn.

Mr. Straus is credited with originating first mortgage bonds and he won wide recognition through his plan for safeguarding first mortgage loans on improved real estate, made available to the general investing public. His company was among the first to underwrite large buildings, financing among others the Chrysler building, the Chanin building, the Westinghouse building, and the Straus building.

Mr. Straus was born in Ligonier, Ind., the descendant of a line of continental bankers.

The County Fair

LOTS of folks are going to the county fair next week and get a real kick out of it. They may not admit it, but they will. There's something about going to fairs that relieves the urge to eat peanuts and throw the hulls to the four winds and permits one to test the capacity of their cheeks and the veracity of their dentist by stuffing a whole two-bits worth of taffy candy in their mouth at one time without so much as a hint of embarrassment. The school kids of other generations will stand around and view with something akin to envy the break the present day pupils are getting with their displays and the folks who never knew that fruit ever grew in anything but tin cans with pictures on them will stand spellbound before the shelves laden with the year's harvest. There are those of us who will gaze longingly at the merry-go-round and maybe if we go the second day we will take a chance on mounting the ponies once more.

Reducing

A COUPLE of glances at the "clothes line" convinces folks in Exhibit A of the pleasingly plump class that something has to be done. This freedom which so many have enjoyed for aeons, sooner and not later must come to an end and even now there are murmurings and mutterings of more stays and firmer foundations. The pineapple diet has abdicated in favor of the lemon and honey beverage as a sure and safe reducing menu and sylphness through sacrifice has become the answer to the outsize femme's prayer. Here's an original suggestion for those suffering from shadows in the shape of one or more chins: A seat in the fifth or sixth row at a good wrestling match. Guaranteed to cure in one season. Lively Tourists

SEPTEMBER sees the last of the summer's crop of tourists and folks who eat where they listeth providing the price suits, miss them a lot. Post-holiday breakfasteers in a local restaurant were roused from their semi-sleep over their coffee by the entrance of two lively youngsters, bright as dollars (if you remember 'em) singing at the top of their voices. Folks in their vicinity were unable to suppress a smile when their mother serenely and effectively squashed a request that icecream be included in the breakfast menu.

Don't tell a New Yorker that you wouldn't live in New York on a bet. It's a such a chestnut.

SYNOPSIS

Elsa Chase, beautiful girl whose legs are paralyzed, wins the love of Jack Winslow, adopted son of Arnold Winslow, wealthy retired lawyer of Washington, D. C., at whose home she is a guest. The elder Winslow suspects Elsa is not all she pretends to be, however, and seeks the services of G. Thorne, detective, in an effort to probe her past and prevent Jack from marrying her. A mysterious woman in blue has been seen talking to Elsa several times. Arnold Winslow brings Dr. Paul Kane, noted surgeon, to examine Elsa. The girl consents reluctantly. Later that night Kane is found dead on the ground under the window of the bathroom of his suite. The coroner starts an investigation. The door of the bathroom from the window of which Kane fell is found bolted on the inside, with the key to the other lock outside the window. Elsa Chase is strangely upset on learning of Kane's death from Thorne.

CHAPTER 6

Poison

WHEN Elsa Chase burst into tears at the news of Kane's death, Thorne felt decidedly ill at ease. He had never learned to look with equanimity on a woman crying. In fact he had met very few women like the girl before him.

With a curious sense of discomfort, Thorne admitted to himself that her unusual and elusive beauty was of the type to catch and hold the attention of men; it made, therefore, all the more singular the apparent dislike that Arnold Winslow had for his adopted son's fiancee.

"I am sorry to have brought you bad news," the detective said simply. "I supposed you had heard something of it; Dr. Kane met his death almost under your window, so to speak.

Elsa's eyes flew open. "What is that you say?" she stammered, and her voice had grown hard, unnatural. He met his death?"

"He fell out of the upstairs bathroom window and was killed."

"And was killed"—the look of horror in the girl's eyes gave place to another emotion—was it terror? It was gone before Thorne had time to analyze it. "I—I," desperately Elsa strove to control her voice and keep it steady, "I liked Dr. Kane, although I saw him for the first time last night."

"Ah, then he was not a relation of yours?"

"Certainly not," swiftly. "Why should you think that?"

"You seem so upset—over a casual stranger."

Elsa looked up swiftly, but she gained nothing from her scrutiny; his rugged features and handsome dark eyes held an expression save of solicitude—for her? Her fingers, playing with her handkerchief, grew icy cold.

"But suppose that 'casual stranger,'" mimicking his tone, "had held out hopes to you of eventual recovery from this," touching her wheel chair with a gesture pathetic in its hopelessness; suppose Dr. Kane had promised an operation which might relieve the pressure on my spine—so that I might walk again" — her low musical tones barely reached his ears. "Then, Mr. Thorne, put yourself in my place, and you will understand the shock his death is to me."

The detective did not reply immediately and she wondered at the cause of his silence. Suddenly Thorne's eyes shifted to the tobacco smoke curling upward from his cigarette. Her voice, her words, had the ring of truth.

Bah, he was a fool to be taken by old man Winslow. It was not his place to search out some mare's nest and find an impediment to the proposed marriage—let Winslow do his own house cleaning.

"Miss Elsa," the trained nurse was running down the staircase, "why didn't you send Lambert for me?"

"But I didn't need you." Elsa laid her hand affectioantly on her arm. "Alice, this is Detective Thorne of," consulting the card still in her lap, "of the Universal Detective Agency." Only Elsa felt the sudden start the nurse gave. Her stolid expression, however, did not alter.

"I am pleased to meet you," she stated stiffly, bobbing her head in Thornes' direction. "Now, Miss Elsa, you must come back to your room; you haven't had your usual drops."

"True; I came to see if Jack had returned with the medicine. Would you mind, Mr. Thorne," her smile was very engaging, "ringing the bell over there for Lambert?"

But the nurse stopped Thorne. "It isn't necssary, Miss Elsa," she explained. "Mr. Jack phoned his father that he was arrested for speeding and would be out as soon as he could get away from the police station. He's sending the medicine by messenger." Without asking permission, Miss Kline turned the chair about and addressed the detective over her shoulder. "Mr. Winslow wishes you to come upstairs to the den again, Mr. Thorne."

Thorne found Winslow pacing restlessly up and down the den.

"I feared you had gone," he exclaimed. "Come in and close the door."

But Thorne did neither. "I'm due at my office, Mr. Winslow," he said. "You can always reach me there if you care to see me again."

Winslow looked at him aghast. "What's the matter with you," he exploded. "Come in and sit down," with more emphasis, and crossing the room he slammed the door. "I apologize, Thorne."

"What for?"

"I should have offered you a retaining fee. Will $500 do?"

The detective drew up a chair and sat down by the desk, then still in silence he gazed about the den.

He cleared his throat. "I'll accept this check, Mr. Winslow, on one condition."

"Well, what's that?" 'as the detective paused.

"That you tell me your real reason for your," hesitating, "shall we say hatred, of Elsa Chase?"

Winslow turned brick red and then for a second he hesitated. "I could resent your attitude, Thorne, and would do so, except that I want results, and we can gain results only by mutual understanding——"

"Quite so; that is the motive prompting my question."

Winslow's high color faded somewhat. "You've been talking to that girl. Oh, I'll admit her power of fascination, but——" he bit his lip viciously. "I'm convinced she's an adventuress and I want actual proof of it."

Thorne laid the check back on the table, but before he could voice his refusal a tap sounded on the door, followed instantly by its opening.

"What, Leonard, back so soon?" Winslow gazed at the surgeon in surprise. Dr. Leonard McLane closed the door behind him.

"I have grave news for you," he paused and glanced questioningly at Thorne and Winslow guessed his meaning.

"You can speak before Thorne," he declared; "he is looking out for my interests in an important," he glanced sidewise at the expressionless detective, "case."

McLane, absorbed in his news, paid no attention to the attitude of the two men. "I've just come from the city morgue," he stated, leaning his elbow on the desk, "and was present while Coroner Penfield performed the autopsy on Kane."

"Was his neck broken?" asked Winslow.

"No," was the brief reply.

"Oh, was it concussion of the brain?"

"No." The surgeon glanced about to make certain they were alone. He was a frequent visitor, as well as their family physician, and he and his wife often played bridge in the den, which he knew adjoined Mrs. Winslow's boudoir. The door to that room, however, was closed, and again McLane addressed his silent companions, keeping his voice lowered.

"Evidently, Winslow," he went on, "Kane's fall was broken by the branches of the dogwood tree for, while his shoulder was dislocated, and his head nd cheek cut and gashed, no injury was serious enough to cause instant death."

His two hearers sat back and looked at him; Winslow, his face like chalk, was incapable of speech.

"Well, what then?" questioned Thorne. "Was his sudden death due to angina pectoris or the rupture of an aneurism?"

The surgeon shook his head. "To neither one," he said simply. "We found nothing organically wrong."

"In other words," Thorne spoke slowly, thoughtfully, "you imply Dr. Kane did not die from accidental injuries, nor from natural causes." He regarded Winslow, who sat hanging on their words, his face a study in expressions. "Well, Dr. McLane what killed Kane?"

The physician glanced cautiously at the boudoir door to make certain that it was still closed.

"The exact cause of death I am not prepared to say now," he said, weighing his words carefully; "a further blood test will determine the poison used."

"Poison!" Winslow half rose from his chair, then sank back as the hall door was thrown unceremoniously open to admit an agitated butler.

"If you please, sir," he stammered. "Inspector Mitchell and the police are downstairs!"

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

YESTERDAY was Sunday, and when I had let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth and had put on my short britches and had went down and milked the dummed brutes, and had got my face fed, and my ant had got her Sunday morning exercise washing my face and neck and ears, and we were going out to the pasture, the bunch said to let's go down to where the road paving gang was working. So when we had shut the gate on the cows we hiked out, and it was an offal warm day, so when we had got there we sot in the shade of one of the machines till it was near Sunday school time, and there was a barrel of tar there, and we made it up to play one game of hide and seek before Sunday school, and we chose up and I was it. Then the Lost Bag of Tripe said the blinder should stand on the top of the tar in the barrel and count up to 200 so as to give them time to hide good ,and I thought that was a good idee, for I could peek between the machinery. So I stood there and counted 200 good and slow and thought how supprized they would be that I could find them so easy. And then I hollered "Ready or not you must be caught" and went to jump down off the barrel, but both my feet had sank in the tar and I couldn't pull them out, and I kept getting deeper and deeper; and then the bunch snuck back one by one and gave me the laugh. Then they tried to pull me out but couldn't and Hopper went up the street and got a policeman and he tried. Then he turned in a fire alarm and the whole fire department came and they cut the barrel away, but they still couldn't get me out, and I kept pulling up my britches as I sunk lower. So then they turned the hose on the tar to cool it, but the water didn't make it hard enough, so they loaded me into the chemical, tar and all, and we all went to the ice house and they piled cracked ice around the tar and told me to tell them when my legs began to get cold, so I did, and then they laid me down and took hatchets and chipped the biggest part of the tar off, and then they cracked the rest of it and pulled it off my legs in little pieces, and the fine hairs on my legs certainly hurt when they pulled, but they got it all off after a while and off of my shoes, and then a fireman gave me a skate in the pants and we skun out and left them laughing. I will never do that again. I was scairt, and all of us missed Sunday school, but my father hasn't found it out yet. I hope he don't. But someone always tells him.

Today was Monday, and nothing happened. We got chaseted out of an orchard and I fell over the fence and my shirt came out so I lost all my apples, but I could run better so I got away. The Lost Bag of Tripe said he didn't kow the tar would stick me. Such a lire as he is will make a good grandfather.

Love's Reawakening

A Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

BY ADELE GARRISON

Madge Reveals Her Plan to Placate Phil Veritzen.

I EXPERIENCED the mental state known as "being on nettles" while I waited for Dicky's reply to my request that we sit down at one of the tables in the deserted dining-room of the hotel while he listened to me without comment. His was so precariously balanced a mood that a straw might change it. But his reply was prompt—and complaisant.

"Yours to command," he said, giving my hand a little squeeze before releasing it. "But what about the people running in and out?"

"Nobody will be here save Purnell, Mr. Seibel and the florists' men, and I think they are all adepts in minding their own business."

"Leave us hope!" he quoted, laughing, and taking my arm walked to the table I had indicated.

"Now shoot the works," he said, laughing, but there was a certain tenseness in his manner that warned me to be wary.

Madge Tackles Dicky

But I had made up my mind to stake everything upon a frank appeal to my husband, and I put my elbows upon the table, rested my chin upon my intertwined fingers and looked steadily into his eyes.

"Dicky," I began slowly, "I think we all agree that the affairs of Noel and Mary are in a precarious condition."

"If that's what you want to call it," he retorted with an impish grin. "I'd say they were in a bad way, but suit yourself."

I grinned back at him, flushing at his teasing, but went on steadily.

"And that the only person who can change things speedily is Mr. Veritzen?"

I tried not to pause at the name but, for a second, it seemed impossible to utter it. Dicky looked at me shrewdly.

"Sort of sticks in your crop, does it not?" he asked with a sardonic little grin. "Well! I don't blame you. Of all the ring-tailed hyenas, he's the leader. But why have anything to do with him. If I were Mary or Noel, I wouldn't want any reconciliation. They don't need him anyway. I can take care of my niece, I think, and Noel will find something or other."

There was in his words and manner the vague comfortable belief in miracles with which so many people solve unpleasant problems. I braced myself for argument.

"Think a minute!" I urged. "Taking care of Mary is all right as a theory, but you know that Mary has just two possibilities for happiness—marriage to a man she loves or her career. Philip Veritzen's flaming sword bars her from either. You cannot make up to her for that. And you also know how high-spirited Noel is. If he can get—not a gift from his father—but the release of the money which belongs to him, which was his mother's, it will mean the salvation of his self-respect and his ambition. And, again, only Philip Veritzen stands in the way."

"Seems to me a simple problem," Dicky growled. "Gunmen are cheap, I understand. Why not have the old buzzard bumped off?"

"I have considered it," I told him, daughing, "but it is really too risky, for the person behind the bumper. No, I'm afraid we must get at it from another angle, and that's what I want to ask you."

"I suppose you want to exercise your well-known influence," he said with a sneer which I ignored.

"If I have any, yes," I answered, "just as Lillian does." I brought in my friend's name as one might bring up a stack of reserve ammunition, knowing his respect for her opinions, and his long-standing affection for her.

How to Handle Veritzen?

"You know we've all agreed that Mr. Veritzen has been like an insane person in his behavior toward Mary and Noel," I went on steadily. "Since his return, he has been less venomous, less truculent when their names are mentioned. Whether this is because he is returning to sanity, we do not know. He may be actuated by affection for Noel, or fear of what Noel can do with those threating, scurrilous letters he sent to him and to Mary."

"That's where the shoe pinches, all right," Dicky interposed.

"Perhaps, and we would be very foolish if we did not take advantage of it. But you know very well that he is as obstinate and hot-headed as —some other people I might mention—" I smiled at him —"and if he thought he was being threatened he would run amuck again—or at least Lillian thinks so. She says there is but one way to handle him at this juncture—when his anger against Noel and Mary appears to be softening——"

"And that is?" Dicky queried as I paused.

LEE STREET FAVORED TO END SERIES

ERIE HOPES DEPEND ON PRICE, LANG AND STAR CENTER-FIELDER

No. 2 League Rulers Expected To Do Plenty with Shoemaker's Offerings.

BY BOB ELLIOTT

Having already defeated them once by the most conclusive score of 7 to 4, Lee Street looms as a rather heavy favorite to edge out the Erie Roundhouse team today and end the 1930 Little World Series. However, there are countless reasons on the other hand why the Roundhouse boys should stretch the series to a seventh game and they'll bear mentioning.

First and most important is the fact that Lee Street after a spectacular start that saw them edge Calvary, 5 to 4, and then defeat the Roundhouse, hasn't been able to play a single game and the rest may do them more harm than good. They were "hot" and could they have played their third game that same week there wouldn't have been much doubt as to who would have won.

Now they are more or less of a doubtful victor especially with the Erie team back into its old hitting form. Carl Fadley, the Lee Street wonder hurler (it's a wonder how he wins) is due to get a good shellacking and the Roundhouse boys are due to give it to him. This Fadley doesn't seem to have much of anything but still has plenty to win and with men on bases the boy is there.

Hit Him Hard

However, what's causing us to name Lee Street is the fact that they hit Shoemaker and they hit him plenty hard in the first encounter between the two teams. A dozen hits rattled off his delivery and they meant runs. If Price, Lang and Robbins who have been doing absolutely all of the Erie hitting can keep going against Fadley, Erie has an excellent chance of winning. If they don't keep going the Erie has about as much chance to win as I have of working at the Erie Roundhouse.

The two teams are clouting at a goodly pace. Lee Street in two games has pounded out 19 hits out of 50 trips to the plate for a batting average of 311 while in three games Erie has an average of 285. They have collected 20 hits of which Lang, Price and Robbins are credited with 17. Lee Street has made four errors while the Roundhouse team has committed seven.

Yes, sir, it looks like Lee Street and the end of Marion's recreation baseball season this evening. You'd better come early if you want a seat because standing room will probably be at a premium.

CARDINALS NOW REAL THREAT TO CUB NINE

St. Louis Outfit Whips Reds Twice as Champions and Giants Each Drop Single Game.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

The National league pennant race depends on the final intersectional series.

The Giants have done well so far this season in entertaining westerners, while the Cubs have turned in about as many victories in the east as their stay-at-home rivals.

Hack Wilson 11 to 0, and 4 to 2, making it seven straight victories and a clean sweep of the eleven home games against Cincinnati. The Cubs and the Giants both lost single games.

The St. Louis Cardinals now hold second place only two and a half games behind the Cubs and are closer to the league leaders than any team has been for some time.

The Red Birds scored a double victory over Cincinnati yesterday, although Ed Brandt allowed only two hits while Phil Collins gave the Braves seven. Boston turned the tables in the second, winning 2 to 1.

The Philadedphia Athletics were all set to put the American league pennant away in their locker after two innings against Washington, but the Senators, after losing a game on Saturday, scored two runs in the ninth to win 7 to 6. The teams start their final four of the west with the Athletics 6½ games ahead.

Yanks Nearly Out

The New York Yankees tottered on the verge of mathematical elimination from the race as they dropped the first game of a twin bill to the Boston Red Sox 5 to 3, while the A's were ahead, but they recovered by winning the second game, 5 to 2, and retained the bare possibility of beating out the leaders.

The Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Browns ended their season's play all square when the Browns pounded out a 9 to 6 victory in their rain-hampered final clash. The Chicago White Sox won their last clash with the Cleveland Indians, 5 to 2, behind the six-hit pitching of Rookie Jim Moore.

Berkeley Bell on Threshold of Tennis Fame

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 8—Berkeley Bell, fiery Texan, stands on the threshold to the tennis hall of fame today.

An upset victor over the great Jean Borotra last Saturday in the first round of the men's national championships, Bell is presented with a splendid opportunity these next few days to carve himself a place in American tennis annals never before occupied by a youngster of his tender years. First Fritz Mercur, then Cliff Sutter, Sidney Wood on Thursday, and then Wilmer Allison—that is the stiff program which awaits the boy who startled the net world when he tripped up the great "Bounding Basque." Bell has beaten the greatest of the foreign threats, the man who was favored to play Tilden in the final. Now Mercur, Wood, Allison should come easy.

Mercur probably will. The handsome veteran who was called the "rising star of Bethlehem" when he won the national intercollegiate title for Lehigh, hasn't won an important match this season.

AMERICANS FAVORED OVER BRITISH TEAM

U. S. Riders Doped To Win Polo Series in Two Straight Matches.

By The Associated Press

WESTBURY, N. Y., Sept. 8—The American polo team led by Tommy Hitchcock, is a prohibitive favorite to beat Great Britain in the second match of the international polo series on Wednesday and retain the Westchester Cup, held by this country since 1921.

So impressively did the cup defenders win the first game on Saturday, 10-5, that experts concede Great Britain little or no chance to salvage even one game out of the series. A third game, if necessary, will be played Saturday.

Both teams probably will stand pat on the lineups they used Saturday. The British riders are seriously handicapped by a scarcity of reserve material due to injuries and sickness.

The challengers put up a gallant fight for four periods, holding the Americans to a 5-3 count, but in the last half, Hitchcock and his mates piled up five more goals while holding the invaders to two.

Leading Pros Ready for Opening of Championship

NEW YORK, Sept. 8—America's greatest professionals gathered at the Fresh Meadow club today for the 36-hole qualifying round of the professional golfers' association championship.

The course is 6,500 yards with a par of 35-35—70.

Leo Diegel is defending his title. He dethroned Walter Hagen in 1928 after Hagen had won for four straight years, and then defended his title successfully against Johnny Farrell in the final round last year.

Hage failed to qualify in the sectional trials this year but Farrell is on hand and so are Horton Smith, Al Espinosa, Tommy Armour, Gene Sarazen, Johnny Golden Harry Cooper and a host of others.

WESLEYAN FOOTBALL PROSPECTS DOUBTFUL

Rinnert of Marion and Jensen of Mt. Gilead in List of Returning Veterans at Delaware.

By The Associated Press

DELAWARE, O., Sept. 8—While Ohio Wesleyan university's football prospects for the coming season appear doubtful to close followers of the team, due to the necessity of reconstructing the backfield, there will be no lack of coaching for the 50 or 60 candidates who are expected to turn out for the first practice Wednesday.

Westfall

The coaching staff will include four varsity coaches, four fresman coaches and a trainer. This staff will devote all of its time to the varsity candidates until the freshies are called for practice later this month.

Wesleyan will have a veteran line this fall. Available lettermen include Osborn, Akron; Bryan of Cleveland; Jensen, Mt. Gilead, and Melvin, Chillicothe, for the ends; Kraft, Oak Park, Ill.; Jones, Delaware; Rinnert, Marion, and Raugh, Altoona, Pa., tackles; Neiberg, Cleveland, and Flint, Syracuse, guards.

Backfield candidates include: Dickerson, Adena, and Glnaven, Springfield, fullbacks; Carlisle, Columbus, quarterback; Reger, New Philadelphia, Westfall, Dayton, Gandrup, Rocky River and Campbelle, Bellefontaine, halfbacks.

Gordon, Johnstown, Pa., and Minson, Silverton, will battle for the post at center.

PLENTY OF BACKS

Pennsylvania Has 17 Backfield Men Ready For Season.

By The Associated Press

CAPE MAY, N. J., Sept. 8—If football games were won by backs alone, Pennsylvania would be well set for its tough schedule which includes Wisconsin, Kansas, Notre Dame, Georgia Tech, Cornell and Navy.

From the 17 speedy backs cavorting over the seaside landscape here, the new head coach, Lud Wray, is reasonably certain of turning out three formidable backfield combinations.

Captain Dick Gentle of Brookline, Mass., has been nominated to call signals for the first team as Mort Wilner, Gentle's backfield mates probably will be Walter Masters, Philadelphia, and Waren Gette, Phillipsburg Pa., halfbacks and Charles Greene Forest Hills, N. Y. fullback.

WINS CINCY TITLE

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 8—Harry Boyer of the Losantiville Country club won the Cincinnati professional golfers championship yesterday by defeating George Stark of the Fort Mitchell country club 4 and 2. Boyer, who played the 36-holes in one stroke over par, finished the first round, one-up.

CORBETT ELIMINATES WEIS IN SEMI-FINALS OF MAR-O-DEL PLAY

Links 25-Foot Putt on 18th Hole To Win Match, One Up.

Sinking a 25-foot putt from the edge of the green on the final hole W. A. Corbett defeated Jack Weis, one up to enter the final round of the Mar-O-Del club's golf championship to be played next Sunday. Jack Gompf easily eliminated R. T. Raub, five and four in the other semi-final match yesterday to qualify as Corbett's opponent for the championship trophy.

Gilmore Hiett won the lower flight by defeating Frank Kette four and two in the 36-hole finals that were completed yesterday. Hiett was awarded a prize donated by Vic Elsasser, Frank Dombeck and Shuey Shoemaker. Hiett's early lead kept him safe from a rally by Kette on the last nine.

Corbett and Weis started their match, which was the most thrilling of the tournament so far, on Saturday afternoon but darkness curtailed the proceedings on 15th hole with the match even. Starting on No. 7 on the second round Sunday, Weis took a stroke lead but Corbett copped 8 and the match was even with one to play. Corbett found him on the edge of the green in three with Weis on the edge of the in four. The winner then pulled putt that eliminated Weis. The trickled slowly toward the hole finally dropped in.

The 36-hole final round between Gompf and Corbett will be played next Sunday with 18 holes carded for the morning and 18 for the afternoon.

Gompf reached the finals through victories over Bob Wolger, Frank Eberl and R. T. Raub. Corbett eliminated Bob Mish, A. Morrison and Weis on the way to the finals.

"All Quiet on Western Front," Acclaimed as Greatest Story, Coming to Palace Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday; Ann Harding in "Holiday."

BY HALLIE HOUCK

THE biggest box-office sensation of the year, one of the best sellers for months in book columns, "All Quiet on the Western Front," comes to the Palace Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday as one of the most heralded masterpieces of realism and naturalness produced in motion picture studios.

Erich Maria Remarque startled an indifferent and unthinking world when he published his gripping, beautifully told story of the war, from the viewpoint of seven German schoolboys, all under 20, who trooped off to war in 1914 with the fire of youth and patriotism, only to come to the shattering of their every illusion.

The book was marvelously written, and for months, any one who hadn't read "All Quiet," was simply "out" in conversational gatherings.

Universal bought the motion picture rights to the book and produced a talking picture that has been acclaimed by any and all who saw it. Louis Wolheim, Lewis Ayres and John Wray have the three leading roles, although to make this picture what it is, each character was picked for his or her fitness for the part. Each role stands out, according to critics, as a unique piece of dramatic acting.

Other featured players are Raymond Griffith, George "Slim" Summerville, Russell Gleason, William Bakewell, Scott Kolk, Walter Browne Rogers, Ben Alexander and Owen Davids, Jr.

The picture covers the years of 1914-18 when the world was stark and stricken by the great conflict. The book was not the story of any nation, but the story of the human race, with seven German boys bringing out the tragedy of war. Lewis Milestone directed the picture.

WHAT is the holiday time of life? The calm era of advanced years when one's battle for success has ended, or the zestful time of youth, with its greater capacity for enjoyments?

Ann Harding

The answer is to be found in "Holliday", another widely discussed and favorably criticized picture coming to the Palace next Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday with splendid cast including Ann Harding, who is said to have the finest role of her career, and to make the utmost of it, Mary Astor, lovely brunet, Edward Everett Horton, comedian, Robert Ames, capable leading man, and Hedda Hopper, one of the "smart" women of the screen, whose presence and ability lend interest to any picture.

Ann Harding, who was seen here last in "Condemned," if we remember rightly, has a rare, rich voice that is one of the biggest assets toward success in Hollywood today, and when coupled with her histrionic talent, is unbeatable.

Miss Harding was on the stage before going into pictures, and, cheer up office girls, she attributes her beautiful voice not to the stage, but to her work in the office. After a few months as secretary in a New York office she progressed to the point where she herself dictated letters, using a dictaphone from which typists transcribed them.

When her first letters came back from the typists she found them, for the most part badly done. She found that the best typists were careful to pick the best dictaphone records and if a dictaphone worker earned a reputation for making records that were distinct and easy to understand, the more experienced typists claimed their products as a right. To get this service from the typists she set about to perfect her own voice and enunciation.

STOCKS SHOW SLIGHT GAINS

Bullish Operators Continue Drive Toward New High Levels.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Sept. 8—With the general level of share prices in the area that brought grief to the July bull campaign, bullish stock market operators today continued to drive on toward new high levels for the recovery from the June deflation.

Although several of the leading issues such as U. S. Steel, were somewhat sluggish, a wide assortment of issues was marked up one to three points, with a few wide gainers gaining five to more. Impressive advances one to more than five points included American Can, American Telephone, Kennecott, North American, General Motors, Radio Keith, Air Reduction, Sears Roebuck, DuPont, Montgomery Ward, Gulf States Steel, Southern Pacific, Transamerica and Lehman Corp., Columbian Carbon Auburn, and Diamond Match gained more than a point.

Although the market was somewhat more active than it has been of late, commission houses found that general public still cautious. Many of the pool favorites were carried over in large volume, evidently in an effort to make an improved appearance on business. The tone was scarcely of a character to influence the market one way or the other, but the more cheerful tenor was maintained.

The announcement that the new issue of treasury certificates would bear the low interest rate of 2¼ per cent was regarded as a fresh indication of the plentitude of capital seeking employment.

In the bond market, prime liens continued in demand, steadily receding yields. Call money held at 2½ per cent.

CHICAGO WHEAT MARKET ACTIVE

Uncertainty of Argentine Situation Causes Prices To Shoot Higher.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Sept. 8—Uncertainty regarding the Argentine situation combined with strength in Liverpool quotations gave the Chicago wheat market a show of activity at the start of trading today. Buying orders from commission houses sent prices higher at the start and after a small reaction values moved up sharply with the December delivery as high as 92½ a bushel. Corn was steady with some buying.

Corn started unchanged to 1-2 lower, but afterward climbed above Saturday's finish.

Wheat sagged around one cent a bushel from the best level because of scattered selling and a let-up of buying. Trade was mixed and the market nervous. The seaboard reported a moderate export business over the week-end, mostly Canadian wheat. Liverpool prices were higher because of complaints as to the poor condition of the wheat crop in many parts of western Europe and reports of large wheat shipment last week to Germany and Italy.

Merchants' stocks in the United Kingdom were reported as almost exhausted and the quantity of wheat in the holds of traders now on the high seas bound for England have decreased nearly 800,000 bushels. Russian offers of wheat were higher in price and less abundant. Short sellers were driven to cover at Liverpool by these reports and with the consequent buying prices bulged.

An official announcement from Argentina said the grain exchange at Buenos Aires was closed today because of a holiday. Corn weakened from profit-taking and some selling. Oats followed wheat and corn. Provisions sagged slightly because of sympathy with grains.

MOB INVADES JAIL, KILLS NEGRO IN CELL

Attack Follows Killing of Officer in Georgia; Another Man Sought.

By The Associated Press

DARIEN, Ga., Sept. 8—In the face of machine guns mounted in the streets, an armed band of men forced its way into the McIntosh county jail today and lynched George Grant, 40-year-old negro accused of killing one officer and wounding three other persons in an early morning gun battle.

The men disregarded the pleas of Col. Roy Neal, commanding the Savannah unit of the National Guard, and holding county officers outside the jail at bay with shot guns, crashed into the building.

Grant was shot to death in his cell while Colonel Neal pleaded with the men to "let this Negro live until we catch the other one."

The other Negro who took part in the gun battle was surrounded in a nearby marshland by several hundred men and his capture was expected momentarily.

Early this morning R. Anderson, A. Darien policeman, was wounded as he sought to arrest two Negroes who aroused his suspicions as they approached a bank. A posse trailed them into the swamp near the city and Robert Freeman, chief of Glynn county police, was killed and the others were wounded as the Negroes opened fire on their pursuers.

Others in the posse continued the search and arrested Grant some time later.

Levy, Rate Ordinance To Come Before Council Meet

Request for Proposed One-Mill Tax for City Operating Expenses Expected To Be Renewed at Session Tonight; Electric Rate Discussion Also Scheduled.

Two unsettled problems of major importance which have been brewing in city hall for several weeks will overshadow a meeting of city council tonight. They are the proposed one-mill levy for operating expenses for the city during the next five years, and tentative rate ordinances between the city and the C., D. & M. Electric Co. for domestic, commercial, industrial and street lighting rates here during the next 10 years.

Whether either problem will come up for action in the open meeting is problematical. That both will come up for discussion in the caucus session is considered certain.

Two weeks ago, the finance committee of council recommended that a one-mill levy for operating expenses of the city be placed on the ballot for public vote this fall. The recommendation never reached the open meeting, but was definitely rejected in caucus session. However, the levy proposal has been revived and it is probable that council tonight will be asked to reconsider its former action.

Officials have said the city is now receiving sufficient funds to operate all departments 10 months in a year, on a five mill income. The additional one mill is necessary to round out a full year's program in the future, they explain. Without the additional levy, officials will be obliged to curtail activities, reduce the number of street lights, and possibly reduce the fire and police department forces.

Ordinance Tabled

At an earlier meeting, council tabled proposed electric rate ordinances to govern electricity prices here for 10 years when W. G. Slack, member of the franchise committee, declared in open meeting the proposed domestic rate was not satisfactory. His claim was that the small consumer, who is asked to pay eight cents for the first 40 kilowatt hours, is not given a reduction in keeping with lower schedules quote to other consumers.

The proposed rate schedules represent reductions from rates in effect here for the last 10 years.

Receipts of $5,000 from the state from auto tags and license fees that was not anticipated will be appropriated to street repair and maintenance funds tonight by council. Money from this source is limited to street repair and maintenance work.

Several small transfers of city funds also appear on the program of the meeting tonight.
